'The actor’s work on the role’ sounds like a relic from times past. Regardless of the label we give to people on stage – actor, performer, player or sign – they are all performing roles.

Nowadays, the work of directors and actors involves little work on the role. Dramatic Theatre has receded behind other forms, such as performative collages, rituals, mysteries, exhibitions and many others. Older actors have forgotten the practice of complicated, nuanced work on the role; younger colleagues’ knowledge of this classical approach is at best rudimentary and seldom practised.

But how should we approach our existence on stage? What actually is the role?

Precise reflection and in-depth questioning will expand the concept of the role and open up new dimensions for contemporary rehearsal practice and supports the emancipation of the actor as the bearer of meaning on stage.

Expanding out from the many possible connections and relationships between actor and role, we would like to focus our attention on several themes:

The role seeks an actor – the actor seeks a role

A role which transforms into a life – a life which becomes a role

The freedom of the role and the freedom of the actor – their meeting and their crossover

The role of the words – the words of the role

The life of the role without words

The invisible role

The unending role

Birth and death of the role ≠ beginning and end

The line of the role – The corridor of the role – The vertical of the role – The space of the role – The labyrinth of the role – The rhizome of the role – The sphere of the role – The cloud of the role –

We want to explore these themes, among others, through collaborative dialogue, practice and training.

The Colloquium will begin online in Autumn with questions and exercises on our online Hybrid Theatre Platform.

Dear Colleagues,

At our now-traditional yearly gathering, we are looking forward to welcoming and welcoming back colleagues, both old and new. At the beginning of the year, it is a good custom of ours, to recharge the batteries, to grapple with new ideas and to build new contacts with colleagues from across the world, which on many occasions have led to further artistic collaborations.
